

Insect Problems In Deppville????

(Deppville, Sat. 15th October) -- In recent days, there has been a mystery brewing in this tiny coastal town. It seems that an insect has been creating quite a stir amongst the locals. Officials have been left to wonder; does this creature pose a threat to the residents of their community?

Bugaboo, International Bug of Mystery, has been seen about town making wild claims of his law degree, dancing skills, adventures of piracy, and even claims of once being the leader of China. All this has left residents apprehensive about the tiny creature's motives in their community. Is he a danger, or just another insect trying to gain respect?

Security officials have been keeping a close eye on Bugaboo, waiting to see if he does indeed pose a threat to the community. There have been reports that 'Pirates of the Caribbean' stuntman Tony Angelotti may also be missing. Bugaboo has reportedly been claiming to have landed the role of stuntman for the "Pirates" sequels, which are currently in production.

There is also grave concern that the Bug may be going international in his schemes. According to some published reports, Finland has sent more military forces to arm it's borders against a possible arrival from the insect. Bugaboo's next reported stop in his reign of terror is scheduled to be Denmark. Citizens there are already being warned to stock up on insect repellent.

There is also on-going concern that Bugaboo has corrupted some officials in Deppville's government. Rumors have been swirling that the Vice Mayor has been involved in some illegal activity with Bugaboo. No one from the Mayor's office was available for comment. The Mayor himself, Johnny Depp, is on location filming and numerous phone calls to his staff have not been returned.
